CLIENT SNAPSHOT

HENRY FORD MUSEUM EXHIBIT

Source One Digital was thrilled to partner on a creative endeavor that showcased the use of almost every piece of equipment we offer. The 10,000 square foot exhibit at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Michigan displayed the timeless and iconic House Industries use of typography that has graced American graphic design for over 25 years.

Nearly 100 unique signs, displays, and objects were crafted for use in the exhibit. Primarily a combination of digital and dye-sub printed fabrics, Source One helped to create hanging scrims that draped the walls and canopy ceilings. A mock house structure was even created using 3M pressure sensitive material. Our print and finishing engineers were able to create direct-to-wood printed, three dimensional five-foot alphabet blocks, which were gray scale and white ink printed on optically clear films to create mylar looking sketch paper, as well as routed and painted dimensional objects out of various substrates, such as sintra and alupanel.

SOURCE ONE DIGITAL'S CAPABILITIES SHOWCASED IN EXHIBIT OBJECTS ARE:

- Adhesive back wall murals and wraps
- Direct to fabric sublimation printing
- Direct digital print to fabric
- Direct print to wood veneer and styrene
- CMYK + white ink on super clear films
- Dimensional routing and painting
- Brushed metal works
- Sewing
- Hanging hardware
- On-site installation

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Source One Digital has been working with David Dodde, one of the lead curators for House Industries, for nearly 10 years. Dodde is first and foremost an artist and continually pushed the envelope when asking us to bring his quirky and eye catching designs to life.

Dodde was one of Source One Digital's first clients to challenge us to print UV direct onto wood veneer to create custom printed furniture. He has also directed us to print 20 by 20 feet ceiling murals from popular 1970's album cover artwork to prefabricated tiles for use in a national franchised bar and restaurant chain.
